

Group Work Through Drama

5 days 7 to 11 June 2010

£250

This course will enable practitioners and support staff to engage young people and promote personal development through creative and exciting drama activities. Learning will be by practice and participation so students will have first-hand experiences that they can apply in the workplace.

Students will be equipped with a range of creative techniques and approaches to engage often hard-to-reach individuals through group work. Teaching will be flexible and responsive and facilitation methods will be based on experiential learning to reflect the needs of students and their client groups.

The course will explore...

- warm ups
- group exercises & techniques
- planning and delivery
- assessing appropriateness of activity and project for particular client group
- the importance of support, feedback and evaluation
- health and safety
